NEW HAVEN, Connecticut (April 18, 2023) – Thabisa announced the Alive Tour today while appearing on Facebook live. The tour will kick off in Portland, Maine on April 28 at Mayo Street Arts with additional dates lined up throughout the northeast including Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, and New Hampshire.

Tickets are on sale at thabisamusic.com/alivetour. Fans are encouraged to subscribe to Thabisa's newsletter to get exclusive updates on dates, new shows, and ticket information.

“For the Alive Tour, I want to introduce myself as much as I want to learn about the beautiful people of America,” said Thabisa, who will perform songs from her upcoming EP “Petrichor,” which she will release in the fall of 2024. “I want to take you home to South Africa with me,” she said.

Thabisa connects with her fans by telling inspiring stories about overcoming life’s challenges and becoming comfortable in her own skin as a Black woman and immigrant in America. A motivating and inspiring presence on and off the stage, Thabisa has married her talent with purpose, actively engaging in meaningful community work on a regular basis. To her, it's this connection that helps make her life make sense.

Fans will have an opportunity to connect with the songstress by participating in workshops that she will offer at various locations throughout her Tour, which are listed on her website.

Thabisa’s family and friends are sponsoring The Alive Tour.

“Thank you so much for your music, your energy, and your light. Can’t wait to see you on tour. [We] believe in you!” Colleen Olinski said, while making a donation in support of the tour.

Writer and live music supporter Michael Wood commented, “Was on your facebook page to post a compliment and saw [the tour fundraiser], so putting my money where my mouth is.”

Sponsorships are still being accepted. Visit Thabisa’s website to make a gift.

One hundred percent of the profits will go to Rich Arts Collective, a nonprofit that Thabisa founded, which seeks to create impactful cultural experiences that the community can thrive off of. This new venture is inspired by her own work and experiences with working with children in CT schools and from a wide range of performances in South Africa and the United States.

“I hope to be the change I want to see and in effect create positive spaces using music, art, and conversations with the intention to inform, educate, and entertain,” she explains. “In fact, Rich Arts Collective is an extension of who I am.”

She is an international star - a South African native now residing in New Haven, Connecticut, Her sultry sound ranges from raspy transitions as though delivered by Janis Joplin to hip like chops as if Erykah Badu was her conductor on stage to smooth operator like Sade while always and without fail connecting back to her roots by channeling Miriam Makeba aka Mama Africa. Thabisa is more than a songstress, she is a unique sound not yet defined - an experience not to be missed.*
